++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rather cloudy tonight, but becoming largely sunny and warm tomorrow.

This Evening and Tonight:
Turning rather cloudy and murky from the south coast across Cornwall, Devon and Dorset as low cloud redevelops inland this evening and overnight. Elsewhere, dry with clear spells, although some patchy fog forming under clear skies by dawn. Mild. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Monday:
A grey start for many but cloud and any mist or fog lifting and clearing back to the coast through the morning to leave a predominantly sunny, very warm afternoon. Maximum temperature 25 deg C (77 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Early fog patches quickly clearing to hot sunshine on Tuesday, but windy later. Cloudier with scattered showers and a risk of thunder on Wednesday. Variable cloud and showers on Thursday.
